

Tea Box Design Project

For this project, we were tasked with creating our own tea box design from scratch. We were given almost free reign with what we were allowed to create, so I decided to do a black and white box, because I believe that for the most part anything can look great in black and white.

I made a sort of dripping effect that, when finished, will make it look like the box is leaking out of its opening. This opening will be the top of the box where it is opened, and where the tea bags are grabbed. I made a bit of an oval and put the name of the tea inside, with when it was made (like the Est. 1940 tags). I made the leaking drip effect go over the label to make it look more authentic, like the box is really leaking.

I made the top of the box another one of the same oval logo, so that it would match perfectly. Just to make sure it looked the same, instead of recreating the logo, I duplicated it with holding alt and dragging.
